Determinate (bush): These varieties have vines that make little or no growth once fruit is set, so they do not need pruning and may be grown with or without support; fruit ripens within a concentrated time period, so harvest period is shorter than indeterminate varieties.

Indeterminate (climbing/vining): These varieties have vines that keep producing new shoots and blossoms even after fruit set; these varieties should be staked or trellised due to the vigorous nature of the plants; fruit ripens continuously over an extended period.

Heirloom: Old fashioned varieties which have been grown for decades; all seed is open pollinated, plants grow true to type from seed.

Hybrid F1: Seeds developed through intentional crossing of varieties. Seed from these fruits will not produce the same fruit as the mother plant.
